

Jefferson-Myrna Brind Center of Integrative Medicine presents

Bernie Siegel, MD

Hope, Humor and the Art of Healing

As a physician who has cared for and counseled thousands with life threatening illnesses,

Bernie Siegel embraces a philosophy of living - and dying - that stands in the forefront of the medical ethics issues our society grapples with today.

He is a best-selling author of: Love, Medicine and Miracles; Peace, Love and Healing; How to Live Between Office Visits; and Love, Magic and Mudpies.

Saturday, May 9th, 2009, 1-5 p.m.

Registration from noon to 1 p.m.

Jefferson Alumni Hall

1020 Locust Street, Student Cafeteria

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

This exceptional presentation will provide an in-depth understanding and appreciation of how thoughts, emotions, beliefs and attitude can impact health and healing.

Dr. Bernie Siegel will discuss key survival patterns, drawing upon his experiences over the last thirty years with people confronting a wide range of physical and emotional challenges. The roles of love, hope, humor, spirituality, desire, and intention in the healing process will be overviewed, as will the interplay of mind and body memories, thoughts and feelings. The use of dreams, drawings and images as mind-body tools also will be discussed.

The presentation is recommended for those who have confronted their own mortality, health professionals, and for those who are in care giving roles. Dr. Siegel's goal is to empower those who attend with the wisdom to have more hopeful, fuller, and healthier lives and to positively impact those around them.
